

of Orozco, Tomaya, Rivera, and Siqueiros—the Big Four. He has pictures by young Mexican painters, too, who, he predicts, will be the leaders of the future.

One artist in the Davis collection—he uses the signature “Dr. Atl” for his work—interested me especially because when volcano Paricutin was born in a corn field 12 years ago, this man rushed there, bought some land and spent many months painting the life cycle of Paricutin.

Mr. Davis had so many interesting stories about even tiny straw toys and embroidered skirts that it wasn't until I was back at the hotel that I realized I'd acquired the one thing I had been carefully avoiding: an acute case of museum feet.
